What's New In?

5 in 4 days There is no big body that I was going to lift today, so it was just some basic press and bench press. All I did was full front squats, squat press, a couple sets of deadlifts, squat cleans, and more deadlifts. All of it was done with a short rest in between sets, and everything felt pretty easy. I didn't know how long I would have to do this, and didn't know how I was going to feel after. First, I would like to say that this was the best "5 in 4 days" I have had in a long time. I have done 4 days of this once before, and it was really good and I felt like I had gone from being someone who always says he will try to lift 5x/week, to someone who already is doing 5x/week, and I have all of my lifts over my PR. The big thing that made this go better is how I am training for this. I was training not only for the purpose of getting some better lifts, but also for the purpose of being able to do a "5 in 4 days" with heavier weights than before. I use to do it with lighter weights and be happy to have gone 5x/week. I would just make the lifts as heavy as I could handle. The problem with this is that I don't think I can really lift well at all with this intensity. When I would do 5/week, the lifts always went pretty well, and I never really had to worry about crashing at all, but now with the intensity, I'm getting shot. When I did it before, my 2-3 week sessions would usually be 4x5, and 2 days off. This time, I feel like I did probably 4x10. I felt like I was being shot, and was really going to go off on these days, but some times I was happy I could do some reps. What I am going to do for the rest of the week is to basically train every other day, and not get in a heavy set on the days when I am stronger, but if I am feeling pretty shot, I will use smaller weights, like 65%, and work them to a good feeling like I did when I was doing 5x/week. That's what I am going to do for now. I don't know for sure, but I don't think I will be
